A protease (also called a peptidase or proteinase) is an enzyme that helps proteolysis: protein catabolism by hydrolysis of peptide bonds. Proteases have evolved multiple times, and different classes of protease can perform the same reaction by completely different catalytic mechanisms.

The conclusion made by earlier studies that metastable grain boundaries can function as more active CO₂ reduction sites has motivated the search of porous structures to maximize the active sites and to better control mass transport/reaction pathways for further catalysis enhancement [1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6]. One example is the construction of a ...
